The bibliography is an ongoing project, with new items added as I find them. In recent years, discovering new items has become more difficult, but they do continue to turn up, as in the case of 1991-21, which I discovered this spring, and 2002-1, newly published last year. I would appreciate hearing from anyone who knows of writings by Christopher Lasch that have not been included in the bibliography.

The bibliography is organized by year of publication: within each year, books are listed first, then pieces in books, then periodical pieces in roughly chronological order. Cross-references have been added for items subsequently included in The Agony of the American Left (1969-1), The World of Nations (1973-1), The Revolt of the Elites and the Betrayal of Democracy (1995-1), and Women and the Common Life (1997-1). Many of these pieces were reworked in varying degrees for these books, but I have not tried to indicate the extent of revision. I have not included such cross-references for Haven in a Heartless World (1977-1), The Culture of Narcissism (1979-1), and The Minimal Self (1984-1), because previously published material that made its way into these books was usually "reworked beyond much resemblance to [the] earlier essays," as Lasch put it in the acknowledgments for The Culture of Narcissism. Nor have I included cross-references for periodical pieces that appear in The True and Only Heaven (1991-1), in this case because it's likely those pieces (e.g., 1989-2, 1989-3, 1989-6, 1990-4, and 1990-12) were drawn from the book manuscript as it was being written or after it was finished but before the book was published.

I have provided information about article reprints that appeared elsewhere in periodicals, edited anthologies, and the like; but I have not done this for excerpts from his already published books that were reprinted in such settings. I have also not included information on foreign editions and translations of his books and articles.

An earlier version of the bibliography appeared in Intellectual History Newsletter 16 (1994): 67-80.

A few words about this latest update: As noted, two new items by Lasch have been added, along with several new reprint entries and full bibliographical information about 1988-2 (special thanks to Gregory Sumner for locating a copy of this exceptionally fugitive item in a library in Italy). The major additions in this update, however, come in the form of new kinds of material, briefly described below:

(1) For each of Lasch's 11 books, I have added a list of English-language reviews and article-discussions that appeared in scholarly journals, magazines, and newspapers. Each separate list is located beneath the entry for that book in the bibliography. For these lists, I have adopted a bibliographical format modeled on that used by Barbara Levine in her magisterial Works About John Dewey, 1886-1995 (Carbondale: Southern Illinois University Press, 1996): omitting the title (if any) of the review or article-discussion, each citation includes the title of the journal, magazine, or newspaper; the volume number (where appropriate); the date of publication; the page numbers; and, at the end, the name of the author(s) (in parentheses). Unlike Levine's practice, I have listed items in chronological order. Although I have tried to be as comprehensive as possible, I make no claim to exhaustive coverage in my compilations. I have obtained copies of all of these reviews or article-discussions (for some of the newspaper reviews, I have relied on copies obtained via Lexis-Nexis).

(2) In Appendix 2, I've added a list of sound and video recordings of Lasch lectures and conference-discussions.

(3) In Appendix 3, I've added a list of English-language writings about Lasch's life and work. Here, too, I cannot claim to be totally exhaustive in my coverage, though I have searched as widely as possible. In the future, some of the articles currently listed under heading (1) will be moved to Appendix 3. I've also obtained copies of all of these items.

I would very much appreciate hearing from readers with items to add to these new materials, especially those under the headings of (1) and (3).

Acknowledgments: In compiling the bibliography and the new material in this latest update, I want to acknowledge, with deep gratitude, the assistance of my student assistants Kate Lacey, Sally Noedel, and Katie Turnure; my friends Peter Agree, Gregory Sumner, Bruce Thompson, and Robert Westbrook; and the ever-reliable staff of Truman State University's Pickler Memorial Library, especially former interlibrary loan director Sheila Swafford.

APPENDIX 1

The items in the following book were probably written or cowritten by Lasch. After the entry there is a brief discussion of my reasons for making this probable attribution.

1. Headnotes for Documents #609-10, 631 (second half only), 646 (final paragraph only), 647-48, 650-70. In Documents of American History, ed. Henry Steele Commager, vol. 2, pp. 602-603, 603-604, 642, 684, 687, 688-89, 695-96, 696-97, 699, 700, 701, 703-704, 706, 708, 709, 711, 712-13, 714, 718, 720, 723, 725, 727, 728, 729-30, 732-33, 734. 2 vols.; 8th ed.; New York: Appleton-Century-Crofts, 1968. Here are the titles of all the documents, as they appeared in the 8th edition: #609, "Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, September 8, 1954"; #610, "Eisenhower's Letter to Ngo Dinh Diem, October 23, 1954"; #631, "National Defense Education Act, September 2, 1958"; #646, "The Berlin Crisis, 1961"; #647, "Kennedy's Letter to Ngo Dinh Diem, December 14, 1961"; #648, "Black Power, 1962"; #650, "The Cuban Missile Crisis, October 27, 1962"; #651, "Kennedy's Speech at American University, June 10, 1963"; #652, "School District of Abington Township, Pennsylvania v. Schempp...1963"; #653, "The Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, September 24, 1963"; #654, "Wesberry v. Sanders...1964"; #655, "Reynolds v. Sims...1964"; #656, "Escobedo v. Illinois...1964"; #657, "Bell v. Maryland...1964"; #658, "Civil Rights Act of 1964, July 2, 1964"; #659, "Goldwater's Acceptance Speech, July 16, 1964"; #660, "The Tonkin Gulf Incident, 1964"; #661, "Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, August 20, 1964"; #662, "The Warren Report, September 24, 1964"; #663, "The Berkeley Student Revolt, 1964"; #664, "Aggression From the North": State Department White Paper on Vietnam, February 27, 1965"; #665, "Johnson's Speech on Vietnam, Johns Hopkins University, April 7, 1965"; #666, "Johnson's Statement on American Intervention in the Dominican Republic, May 2, 1965"; #667, "Griswold v. Connecticut...1965"; #668, "Social Security Amendments of 1965 (Medicare), July 30, 1965"; #669, "Johnson's Statement on the Riot in Watts, August 20, 1965"; #670, "Ginzburg v. United States...1966." The first half of the headnote for Document #631 in the 8th edition had also appeared in the 6th (1958) and 7th (1963) editions to introduce a different document, "White House Conference Recommendation of Federal Aid to Education, 1956"; the second half of the headnote was new to the 8th edition, as was the document itself. The headnote for Document #646 in the 8th edition had also appeared in the 7th edition, but in the 8th edition a new final paragraph was added to describe the public debate over fall-out shelters and civil defense policy that the 1961 Berlin crisis had stirred up. Documents #648, 654, 659, 663, 669, and 670 in the 8th edition as well as their headnotes were dropped from the 9th (1973) and 10th (1988) editions for reasons of space.

In the preface to the 8th edition, Commager (who was Lasch's father-in-law) wrote as follows: "In order to avoid an enlargement which would make Documents of American History unwieldy, I have reluctantly had to drop a number of documents which were included in the seventh edition.... By eliminating these I have made room for twenty-six new documents from the period since 1962.... In the selection and the editing of these documents I have been greatly aided by Professor Christopher Lasch of Northwestern University" (p. viii). All the documents listed above (apart from Document #646) were new to the 8th edition and add up to 26 documents. Thus, these are the documents that Lasch at the very least helped to select and edit for the 8th edition. That he also had a role in writing the headnotes for them is suggested by the fact that several of them, especially those concerning "black power" and the urban crisis (#648, 669), the war in Vietnam (#609, 610, 647, 660, 664, 665), civil defense policy (#646, final paragraph), and other Cold War issues (#631, 650, 651, 666), express views on those topics that closely parallel those expressed by Lasch in his writings in the 1960s (e.g., 1961-4, 1961-5, 1961-9, 1961-10, 1962-6, 1962-9, 1962-10, 1963-11, 1965-3, 1965-7, 1965-10, 1968-2, 1968-3). Moreover, though this is somewhat more nebulous, the prose of the headnotes “sounds” like Lasch’s prose, as in phrasing, sentence structure, etc. Neither of these factors proves that Lasch wrote or cowrote them—and I have found no direct evidence on that point—but I do think they make it probable that he did.

Below is a list of recordings of public lectures delivered by Lasch as well as panel and conference discussions in which he participated. They are listed in chronological order. My citations are based on searches done on WorldCat in 2003 and on OCLC in 1997. I do not have copies of the cassette tapes, nor have I listened to them. It is possible the third and fourth citations are duplicates of the first two.

“The New Presidential Ballgame.” 1 sound cassette. N.p. [Santa Barbara, Calif.]: Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, 1975. Lecture by Lasch.

“The Implications of Watergate.” 1 sound cassette. N.p. [Santa Barbara, Calif.]: Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, 1975. Panel discussion with Samuel H. Beer.

“The Modern Presidency: How You Play the Game.” 1 reel. Santa Barbara, Calif.: Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, 1976. Group discussion at a conference on the Watergate crisis, held in December 1973.

“Constitutional Implications of Watergate: A Summing Up.” 1 reel. Santa Barbara, Calif.: Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, 1976. Group discussion at the final session of a conference on the Watergate crisis, held in December 1973.

“The Me Decade: Narcissism in America.” 1 sound cassette. Washington, D.C.: National Public Radio, 1979. Panel discussion with Henry Fairlie and moderator Richard Cohen. Recorded at a National Town meeting at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. and broadcast on NPR on 21 June 1979.

“Revaluing Political and Social Systems Toward a Useable Future.” 1 videocassette. Georgia: JPC Publications, n.d. Apparently a lecture at the ACPE [?] conference in Breckenridge, Colo. in 1991. Also available as a sound cassette from “Meetings Internationale” in Louisville, Ken.

Below is a list of works—by no means exhaustive—that discuss the life and work of Lasch. In some cases, items listed here could well have been included in the lists of reviews and discussions of each of his books that appear in the main body of the bibliography, and vice versa. Eventually, as the corpus of critical writings about Lasch increases, I plan to move some of the items listed there to this Appendix. In a few cases (the pieces by Jackson Lears, Louis Menand, and Robert Westbrook), I’ve included them in both places.

APPENDIX 4

Below is a list of items related to Lasch that I believe do not belong in the bibliography, but that may be of interest. Within each category, items are listed chronologically.

These quote or report on lectures or statements that were subsequently published:

Contribution to "Notable Quotes from the Eastman Conference." Music Educators Journal 70 (November 1983): 43. Three short paragraphs of excerpts from 1984-3.

"Left Behind by the Cold War's End." Washington Post (12 June 1990): E1. A news report by E.J. Dionne that focuses on Lasch's statement at the William Appleman Williams memorial conference as well as the reaction of other participants to it; it contains many quotes from Lasch's statement, which was later published in 1991-11.

"Beliefs." New York Times (17 April 1991): sec. 1, p. 12. A news report by Peter Steinfelds about a lecture, later published in 1991-17; it summarizes the lecture and contains many quotes.

This quotes a paper that was not, to the best of my knowledge, subsequently published:

"Handlin Warns Scholars of 'Decay' in Profession." New York Times (30 December 1970): 8. A news story about a paper delivered by Oscar Handlin at the 1970 convention of the American Historical Association; the final three paragraphs of the story deal with Lasch's critical commentary on the paper, which was delivered at the session, with a phrase and two sentences from it quoted.

These either are excerpts from published pieces or contain interview material, but their brevity differentiates them from the article excerpts and most of the interviews that have been included in the bibliography:

"Glamour in Politics: The Boredom Factor." Psychology Today (August 1981): 83. A very brief, one-paragraph excerpt from 1981-2.

"Standing Up for the Lower Middle Class." New York Times Book Review (27 January 1991): 28. A brief boxed sketch of Lasch, by Barth Healey, that ran with the review of 1991-1 that appeared in the Book Review; it includes brief quotes from an interview.

These are public letters or collective statements that Lasch signed along with others, but his authorship is unclear and in many cases quite unlikely. N.B.: I have not systematically checked for such items in the New York Review, which carried most of the ones that are listed below, nor in the New York Times, which may well contain others:

"The Committee to Defend the Conspiracy." New York Review of Books (19 June 1969): 37-38. Statement of a committee supporting the "Chicago 7" defendants; it lists many signers.

"Petition." New York Review of Books (4 June 1970): 59. See the letter of explanation by Eugene Genovese and Elizabeth Fox-Genovese, "The National Petition Campaign," ibid., 59-60. The campaign was started at the University of Rochester in the wake of the invasion of Cambodia by U.S. forces that spring, and it aimed to get Congress to condemn President Nixon's actions and to require him to withdraw U.S. troops from Indochina. It contains many signers.

"The Mandel Case." New York Review of Books (19 November 1970): 54. A call for contributions to support a legal challenge to the U.S. government's having twice barred Ernest Mandel from visiting the United States. It contains six signers and others not listed.

"Ford's Better Idea." New York Review of Books (25 January 1973): 45-46. A public letter criticizing the Ford Foundation's decision to give a grant to Encounter. It lists many signers.

"Socialists Plan Founding Parley." New York Times (10 September 1973): 21. A news story about a public statement by the Democratic Socialist Organizing Committee calling for a founding convention for a new socialist organization; Lasch is listed at the end of the story as one of 45 people who signed the statement; the story contains extensive quotes from the statement.

"Plea for a Philosopher." New York Times (22 July 1987): sec. 1, p. 26. Letter, dated 13 July 1987, by Stanley Cavell, Ronald Dworkin, Michael Walzer, Christopher Lasch, and Susan Sontag, on behalf of the Hungarian philosopher Janos Kis, who was being denied a work permit by the Hungarian authorities to teach at the New School for Social Research in New York.

These newspaper stories report Lasch's views on a variety of subjects, in the reporter's own words, but also intersperse quotes from Lasch interviews (and/or lectures); in this respect, they resemble Braden's book (1970-3), but their "mixed" format differs from the interviews by Sanoff (1982-4) and Judis (1984-8), both of which separate the prose of the reporters from the interview quotes.

"A Scholar Examines the Besieged Family." Rochester Democrat and Chronicle (26 December 1977): 1C, 4C. An article by Mary Rita Kurycki about themes in 1977-1, with quotes from an interview with Lasch.

"Doomsayer of the Me Decade." Washington Post (24 January 1979): B1, B7. An article by Henry Allen about 1979-1, with quotes from an interview with Lasch at the University of Rochester.

"We're Living on Borrowed Time." St. Petersburg Times (15 November 1987): D13-14, E1. An article by Thomas Harrison about Lasch's visit to, and lecture at, the University of South Florida; it contains lengthy, and very interesting, quotes from either the lecture or an interview by reporter Harrison—probably the latter since they sound conversational and informal.

"Not Everyone Can Live Like Yuppies." Associated Press story (2 August 1991), available on Lexis-Nexis. A news story, with what appear to be interview quotes, keyed to 1991-1.
